THE Ledger of yesterday, in the course on article on the late Butler P. Anderson pays this well-deserved tribute to the com-rade of our martyr in his mission to the death-stricken town of Grenada in 1878 "He [Colonel Butler P. Anderson] and General Smith found the city in the wildest co the sick and dying. They often worked from ht. The mayor fell the day after they ar d, and seen died. The six physicians o place who remained all died. The mortality of the place was appalling. They could not leave. The highest sense of duty an humanity impelled them to remain as the did, until one fell at his post and the other in every vein. And incidentally here we wisay that all the terrible trials and emer gencies of the yellow-fever period of 1878 die not develop a cobler, braver, and more uns fish men than General W. J. Smith. English o rih and ideas, entertaining poli cal opinions at variance with those of mo-couthern people, he had been the object lishke and coolness.
